

Privacy - Recording - Married woman - A married woman too has a valuable right to her privacy of speech with her husband in the confines of the bedroom - Couples speak many things with each other unwary that every word would be weighed one day and put under the judicial scanner - Courts should be very circumspect in such matters before allowing such applications - The Courts cannot actively participate in approving mischief and invite invasion of privacy rights not called for in deciding a case where parties are free to adduce evidence aliunde which may or may not be sufficient to obtain a decree of dissolution of marriage - Fools rush in where angels fear to tread - Matrimonial disputes.

2014 PLRonline 0008
